Synopsis:

Home, Truly, published in conjunction with an exhibition of the same name at the National Museum of Singapore, is an exploration of key shared experiences and moments from the 1950s till today that speak to who we are as Singapore and Singaporeans. Presented from the perspective of personal memories and how they intersect with national events, some of these might bring a smile to our faces, others reveal tensions that arise from living together, and still others recall the different moments that have changed and shaped us over the years.

The exhibition is presented in collaboration with The Straits Times in conjunction with its 175th anniversary. It invites you to consider what makes Singapore our home, and aims to spark conversations about Singapore's past, present and future.
